SENIOR MOVING CHECKLIST

Other Important Tips:

For the first few weeks after the move, keep an eye on yourself (or your loved one). Alert the staff about any difficulty adjusting, as this could be a sign of Relocation Stress Syndrome.

If your loved one suffers from Alzheimer's or Dementia the moving process could be particularly challenging. The goal should be to make your new home as close to the previous home as possible to reduce stress and confusion. Taking pictures is an easy way to help you recreate living spaces from the old home.

Moving is a long, arduous process. Beginning early helps the whole process go more smoothly. We will help guide you and your loved ones through this process, assisting in every task necessary:

- Develop an overall move plan
- Organize, sort and downsize
- Customize floor plans for your new home
- Provide professional packing service
- Arrange move and unpack/stage your items in your new home.
- Arrange for shipping of furniture and other family treasures to your children, grandchildren or other destinations anywhere in the U.S.
- Oversee disposal of unwanted items through possible consignment, donation or trash
- We are a concierge service, ask and we will get it done or find someone who can!
